Abstract

The abstract should be a single paragraph of approximately 150–250 words. Briefly state the problem addressed, the proposed approach, the main results, and the significance of the findings. Do not include citations, undefined abbreviations, figures, or tables in the abstract.

Keywords: keyword one, keyword two, keyword three, keyword four, keyword five (3–6 keywords)

1. Introduction

Describe the background and motivation of the work, the specific problem addressed, and the contribution of this paper. Cite prior work using bracketed numbers, e.g., [1], [2]. The final paragraph of this section may outline the structure of the remainder of the paper.

2. Proposed Method

Present the proposed method, system, or framework. Equations should be numbered consecutively and referred to in the text as Eq. (1). Figures and tables should be placed near their first mention and numbered as Figure 1 and Table 1, with captions below figures and above tables.

2.1. Subsection Title

Use numbered subsections when needed. Body text is 10 pt with single line spacing and justified alignment.

3. Experimental Results

Summarize the experimental setup, datasets, evaluation metrics, and results. Comparative results with baseline methods may be presented in a table. Discuss the implications of the results briefly.

4. Conclusion

State the main conclusions of the work and, if applicable, directions for future research. The full manuscript, including references, should not exceed two pages.
